Surfcamp at the Green Rooms in Sri Lanka

The Green Rooms are part of a beautiful, sustainably built surf lodge at the edge of the beach in Weligama, Sri Lanka, which encourage visitors to live more sensitively by supporting community regeneration.

We believe in making your stay as memorable as possible. Being a small independent accommodation provider means we can tailor-make your visit.

Our accommodation is exclusive, offering five cabins in three buildings, to give you a completely different kind of holiday experience. Groups can book out the whole place and have a real holiday, home from home.

Our beautiful cabins are handcrafted by local carpenters, made from sustainable mango wood and each has something special about it. Rooms are en-suite and three of the five have open air bathrooms for showers under the stars. Traditional hot water hand showers can also be arranged. All have a private balcony or seating area. Each cabin has a four-poster king sized bed, however single beds can be added to make a triple/family room.

Two surfing holiday options

We offer two different holiday packages, ‘Learn to Surf’ and our very popular ‘Surfcamp’ package. If you are a complete beginner or have only just started surfing then these are the best options for you. Both have small classes (maximum eight learners). ‘Learn to Surf’ packages include two hours of tuition per day and surfboard use. ‘Surfcamp’ offers excellent value with three hours of tuition per day and also includes lunch. Tailor-made trips can include snorkelling, fishing, wakeboarding, dolphin spotting and whale watching.

Surfcamp

The best value and the quickest way to learn. Book your accommodation and surfing lessons together. Prices are based on two people sharing, but single packages to suit various budgets can be arranged. The price includes one week’s accommodation, three hours tuition for six days, surfboard hire, post-surf analysis, breakfast and lunch.

Airport transfers and van hire for onward travel and excursions can be arranged at competitive rates. At least 10% of profits go directly back into community projects started after 2004.
Edinburgh as a conference destination

With world-class hotels and venues, such as the award-winning Edinburgh International Conference Centre, an international airport a short distance from the city, good road and rail links and a compact city centre with almost everything within walking distance, Edinburgh is the UK’s most popular conference city after London.

In their free time delegates are spoilt for choice. The city enjoys a lively arts and festivals programme, has famous galleries and museums, royal castles, palaces and is home to the Scottish Parliament. The city also has spacious parks and a beautiful botanical garden and is close to hills and the coast. Edinburgh offers many possibilities for taking up new activities or simply relaxing and unwinding.

Edinburgh is a mature destination and its successful track record at hosting international conferences gives meeting planners the confidence that suppliers in all the conference sectors will deliver quality products and services.

As well as hosting some of the largest events in the world, the city is also suitable for hosting successful conferences of all sizes and to suit every budget. The city has a wide range of unusual and historic venues in which to hold conferences or social events, including The Royal Yacht Britannia, Edinburgh Castle and the Royal Museum.

With over sixty galleries, five theatres and many visitor attractions, there is something for everyone in this city. Visitors can take advantage of the Edinburgh Pass, a European style discount card offering a choice of one, two or three day’s entry to over 30 of the city’s attractions. The Pass also provides exclusive offers from some of Edinburgh's top retail and leisure operators, as well as free bus travel in the city.

Edinburgh has more restaurants than anywhere else in Britain, with everything including African and Mongolian and, of course, traditional Scottish food.

Shopping in Edinburgh is a wonderful experience, with the internationally renowned department stores, as well as designer boutiques.

With such a unique blend of traditional and modern, it is not surprising that recent research found that over 60% of delegates who visit the city on business return as a leisure visitor within two or three years. Not only is there always a lot to explore and experience in Edinburgh, it also acts as the gateway to the rest of Scotland's beautiful countryside.
